

TRAMPS' MIDSUMMER MARCH

Omaha Police Kept Busy Rounding up the Knights of Rest.

CARNIVAL OF VAGRANTS AND VALIANS

Corbee Had Two Wives—Blake's Little Bonfire—Mansfield Caught in Missouri—Echols of White and Gong—Berka Will Be Busy.

It will be a fine aggregation of toughs, bikis and hobos that will face Judge Berka this morning. The city has for some time been suffering from the presence of a number of persons of this character, and their forces appear to have been largely augmented by returning delegates from the recent tramps' convention at Des Moines.

Saturday night Sergeant Shoon and Officers Sullivan and Marshall fell upon the United States hotel and one or two other places, and in one fell swoop gathered in a choice gang of about thirty, consisting of John O'Brien, alias Rooney, who was arrested here six years ago, charged with cracking a safe on Dodge street; Tom Gordon, Ralph Wilson, John Bowman, Frank Bain, Thomas Doyle, Thomas Murphy and John Peterson. Later Officer Marshall got George Kniss, alias Sam, who was charged with possession of a gun, and a man named Echols, alias White, who was charged with having sold a watch to the Italian who keeps a fruit stand at Tenth and Douglas streets, and a revolver to a man named Goldsmith, all of which was recovered by Sergeant Shoop. It is stated by Mr. Goldsmith that from marks made by members of the gang, he believes they have a "plant" of goods stolen from Denver and San Francisco.

There is an unusual large number of vagrants and hobos in Omaha just at present. Tramps are coming in from the west in large droves. Some of the "overflow" from the World's fair has also come here. Many men who flocked to Chicago from all sections of the country, anticipating lucrative employment during the World's fair were disappointed. With funds and hope both gone they soon "struck the road" to follow the star of empire in its westward course.

Caught in Missouri. Harry Mansfield, alias Mansfield King, a young man who is badly wanted in this city, was captured at Sedalia, Mo., yesterday, and is now making the return trip. About two years ago, and during the last months of the late Sheriff Boyd's administration, Mansfield was caught in the act of burglarizing a South Tenth street store. He was arrested by the police and held to the district court on three separate and distinct charges of burglary and sent to the county jail to await trial.

At that time Pat Lynch was the county jailer, and one day while Pat had the prisoners working in the yard, Mansfield, who was among the number, skipped and being something of a sprinter, soon distanced all of his pursuers. Nothing was heard of the young man until a few days ago, when he was arrested by Chief DeLong of the Sedalia police force, who recognized his man by a photograph which had come into his possession. At the time of the arrest, Mansfield was working on a farm near the Missouri town.

Two Wives and a Warrant. H. D. Corbee, a traveling man, was arrested yesterday by request of the Sioux City police, who are said to want him for bigamy and the alleged embezzlement of $40 from a firm by which he was formerly employed.

Corbee admits being married a second time, but says he was reliably informed that his first wife, who is understood to be in Omaha, was dead at the time. He claims that she is responsible for his arrest and wants to make it hot for him, and adds that the embezzlement charge is an old affair that was settled long ago.

Blake's Little Blaze. A burning pile of rubbish in the rear of the house at 106 South Tenth street, occupied by Morris Blake, was the means of gathering a large portion of the fire department and a perspiring crowd of spectators shortly before the middle of the day yesterday. No damage, except to the linen of those who ran to the supposed fire.

Sojourned at the Jail. Rollie S. Killen, a young man who is considerably wanted in Fremont, and was on his way there in custody of Sheriff Milliken, was a distinguished guest at the city jail for a few hours yesterday afternoon.

Broke Her Arm. Mrs. Tracy of 1023 Howard street tripped and fell while walking on Thirtieth street last night, breaking her right arm at the wrist. Dr. Lavender treated the fracture.

There are three things worth saying—Time, trouble and money—and Dr. Witt's Little Early Risers will save you time, as they act promptly. They will save you trouble as they cause no pain, and they will save you money as they economize doctor's bills.

ANOTHER ROYAL VISITOR

His Royal Highness, the Sultan of Johore, is coming.

Among the interesting foreign guests who have recently arrived in Vienna is his royal highness, Abu Bakar, the sultan of Johore. He is on his way to this country to visit the World's fair. He intends, however, to spend some time before sailing for the United States in Carlsbad, whose springs have a beneficial effect upon the bodily ailments from which he suffers. The sultan was received in Vienna with royal honors and was distinguished by the emperor in a way commensurate with his high rank. His royal highness, however, is a stranger to Europe, as he has been the guest of its principal capitals a number of times.

Abu Bakar is now about 64 years old. He is an attractive-looking man of medium height and rather heavily set. His hair, bushy eyebrows and thick mustache are gray, contrasting nicely with the dark eyes and bronzed skin indicative of his race. Until he was 16 years old the sultan had an English mission and it bears the consequence is thoroughly familiar with the tongue of England, the country which exercises a protectorate over his land. The dynasty of the sultan is a continuation of the dynasty of the sultan of Malacca, who retired to Johore on the conquest of the capital by Albuquerque the Great of Portugal in 1511.

Abu Bakar ascended the throne of his ancestors in 1868. Johore is only two degrees north of the equator and is consequently exceedingly hot. The empire occupies the southern part of the Malay peninsula and his royal highness holds sway over about 40,000 Malays and 75,000 Chinese. The country is rich in spices and pepper, and is famous for its silks, embroideries and jewelry. Abu Bakar is one of the pioneers of western culture in the far east. His palace in the capital is a fine mixture of European comfort and Oriental luxury. It bears the name "Istana." It is the chief adornment of a plateau and is surrounded by a beautiful botanical garden, the park containing plants of all kinds, groves and fountains. The rooms of the palace

ARE FURNISHED IN WESTERN STYLE.

Many valuable works of art, gathered by the ruler in his various journeys to the Occident, adorn the walls of the chateau. The adjutant and body physician of the sultan are Englishmen. They are now with him in Europe and propose to accompany him to the United States. Fortunately for his entertainers, Abu Bakar adopts the customs of the countries which he visits as regards the preparation of his food, and is content with the food furnished by the hotels. For that reason he has been a much more welcome guest at the European courts than the sultan of Siam. The food of the sultan is Oriental monarchs, who on their journeys are invariably accompanied by a corps of cooks. These cooks prepare the food for their royal masters according to the tenets of their religion. After the last visit of the sultan to England most of the furniture of the rooms which he occupied in one of the queen's palaces had to be destroyed. The czar of Russia recently had a similar experience with his half-subject, the emir of Bucharia. The blood of the animals killed in the ritual fashion by the cooks of his royal highness ruined, according to foreign papers, the palaces of the czar. The sultan was removed after the guests' departure. The rulers of Austria and Germany for weeks trembled for fear the emir would extend his visit to Vienna and Heriot and entail upon them a loss which they did not care to bear. But Abu Bakar is welcome everywhere, and to the United States promises to be full of interest.

ONE FARE AND A QUARTER

Passenger Agents Arrange Schedule for Missouri River Points to Chicago.

Omaha will not be gratified with one fare for the round trip to the World's fair. Talk to that effect was but a blinding bluff. At the meeting of the city yesterday that the development at Saturday's meeting of the western roads at Chicago indicate that no reliance can be placed in their pretensions that they propose to put in effect a rate of one fare for the round trip, to give the masses a chance to see the World's fair.

It appears now that after it had been decided to make a one-fare rate in coach only on certain days with uncertain limits, the opponents of low rates got through a motion that those rates be confined to the territory between the Missouri river or St. Paul, and a minimum round-trip rate of $15 from Missouri river points and of $13.75 from St. Paul and Minneapolis should apply. This is a second class rate formerly charged. Under this proposition there are no reduced rates from points east of St. Paul or from points west of St. Paul, and only second-class accommodations are furnished at those rates. They are really higher than regular second class rates formerly charged. Under this proposition there are no reduced rates from points east of St. Paul or from points west of St. Paul, and only second-class accommodations are furnished at those rates. They are really higher than regular second class rates formerly charged.

Charges of Intimidation. But the lines terminating at the Missouri river seem to be determined that there should be no reduction in rates in their territory. They are determined to resist any successful bulldozing of the roads that were disposed to accede to the demands of the people and help the World's fair by making low rates.

Their argument is that in order to make as much money as they do now with the present rates they would be compelled to carry many passengers at the one fare rate for the round trip, and as they are working to make money for themselves and not the World's fair they fail to see any good reason why they should reduce rates. There is but one road which dared to resist the reduction of rates, and that was the Wisconsin Central. This road insisted upon a rate of one fare for the round trip from St. Paul and Minneapolis, and this was the only road that was successful. Strenuous efforts were made to induce the Wisconsin Central to recede from its position, but it stood firm as a rock, and finally an adjournment was taken until Monday at 10 o'clock a. m. without taking any action.

MISSOURI RIVER POINTS

The prospects for an immediate reduction in rates in territory east of the Missouri river are anything but flattering. There are a few roads which would put in effect low rates at once, but they are afraid of a general railroad war. Public opinion has no terrors for the western railroad men. They have with them the support of the people in the west that they will retaliate by enacting severe railroad laws. They appear to know from experience that the enactment of such laws can be prevented, or, if any such laws are enacted, they can violate them with impunity. They expect to appease the wrath of the public by making a reduction near the end of the fair and then point to the fact that they did make efforts to bring the masses to the fair, and their good will will be forgotten their previous selfish greediness.

TAKING CHANCES.

Detroit Free Press: It was late at night and my horse was camped played out when I came upon a mountaineer's cabin and I halted the horse. Two or three dogs set upon a furious barking and pressing the door was opened and a voice called through the darkness: "Who's that out there and what are you fussin' about?" "I'm a traveler in search of lodgings," I said. "How many of you?" "Only one." "On a horse or a mule?" "On a horse." "Well, you stay right on that horse till I get that candle and hev a look at you."

HE LEFT THE HOUSE BY A BACK DOOR

and came around to me, holding a candle in his left hand and a shotgun in his right. After taking a long look he asked: "What are you come from?" "Bristol."

WHAT FUR?

"To see the country." "Got any shootin' irons?" "No. He said that the matter that you are so suspicious?" "Well, I want to know who is who before I take him in. You kin git down the hill and I'll gin you a bed, if you want to run the chances?" "What chances?" "Why, my boy Jake is out oon huntin', and will be home linsy. When he comes he'll take a look at you." If Jake says you're a traveler and there's nothin' to fear, then it'll be all right, but if Jake says you're one o' them rone we'll gin you a smellin' round fur stills well, I'll gin you a bed, if you want to run the chances?"

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH—OMAHA

Corner Stone of a New Methodist Church Laid with Appropriate Ceremonies.

FREDERICK GRANTHAM HAS BEEN FOUND

Hurley Has a Tight Squeeze, but Crawls to Liberty—Horse Thieves Steal Within the Shadow of a Church on Sunday.

The corner stone of the new Methodist church was laid yesterday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies. A large number of citizens turned out to witness the services and all the ministers of South Omaha were present. Rev. C. N. Dawson, the pastor of the church, made the introductory remarks. Among other things he said: "The following year Rev. L. H. Edulbrite was appointed to this charge. During his pastorate of two years the little church gave place to a larger, better structure. "In the autumn of 1888, Rev. David Marquet succeeded Brother Edulbrite as pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of South Omaha. During his pastorate of one year the new church was completed, dedicated and opened for service. The members of the church Extension society of the Methodist Episcopal church and a few other small items. At the close of Brother Marquet's year of service, $1,000 borrowed by the church was self-supporting. The church became self-supporting the following year, the debt, amounting to $1,400, was provided for, and during the next year the church was destroyed by fire (January 15, 1893). Since that time the congregation has held its services in Knights of Pythias hall. The work of rebuilding is now making commendable progress. The brick walls of the new church are completed. Our people are subscribing generously—our friends show a keen interest in the work. We have received notice from the board of church extension that another loan and a gift of $500 is ready for us as soon as we have collected a sufficient amount of subscription. This good work will be carried forward as rapidly as possible, and we trust that the members and friends of this church and congregation will have comfortable and commodious quarters for the coming winter."

Following Rev. Dawson was a prayer by Rev. R. Wheeler and an anthem by the choir. Rev. Thomas Stevenson read psalm and Rev. F. Ross conducted the lesson. An able address was then delivered by Rev. Frank Craven, which was followed by prayer by Rev. Speck. Rev. Charles Sudbrook pronounced the benediction and the meeting was over.

The new church is located at the corner of Twenty-third and N streets and will be a very imposing structure when completed. The following articles were deposited in the box: The Christian Advocate, the Northwestern Christian Advocate, the Omaha Christian Advocate, the Epworth Herald, the Major and the Christian. The box of the Methodist Episcopal church and a copy of The Bee.

HURLEY ESCAPES FROM JAIL

There was a jail delivery in South Omaha early yesterday morning. Arthur Hurley, who was locked up one week ago and who was to be tried this morning, was the lucky prisoner. By the aid of a saw, which was passed in by a friend on Saturday night, he succeeded in removing two of the iron bars which lead into the battery room. This made a pretty narrow space, but Hurley managed to squeeze his body through it, and once out he took the lead out of this room to the street and sprang lock wide and easily opened from the inside. The jail was occupied by a half dozen other prisoners, who are in for minor offenses, but none of them seemed to care for their freedom. They are all men as to how or when Hurley got his liberty, but the officers say that it must have been about 4 o'clock in the morning. The door leading into the cell rooms is seldom locked and any person can walk up to the barred door and talk to the prisoners. As the night jailer goes to his room, he cannot be at the station all of the time and as Hurley is an old offender he took advantage of all these things. One of the night jailers is a careful and attentive officer, and no blame can be attached to him for the break. On Saturday nights there is more or less carrying going on and Thomas was kept busy on the street the greater portion of the time.

WITHIN THE SHADOWS OF A CHURCH

A bold case of horse stealing took place in broad daylight yesterday. Miss Wyman, the music teacher, drove her horse to the Presbyterian church in the morning and hitched the animal to a post close by and entered. Shortly afterwards a man came along and unhitching the horse climbed into the buggy and drove away. The police were notified, but the fellow had gotten considerable start and was not located. The Omaha police were also given a description of the outfit and the thief may yet be caught. Miss Wyman is a sister to Councilman W. B. Wyman, the latter gentleman will receive a good reward to recover the stolen property.

FRED GRANTHAM FOUND

Fred Grantham, the bookkeeper who disappeared so mysteriously on Friday night, has been located. His wife received a telegram yesterday from Grantham's brother at Marsfield, Ill., stating that Fred was there at the home of his mother and would start for home Monday. No further particulars are given and it is supposed that Grantham wandered away while suffering from a severe mental strain.

MISGIVING CITY Gossip

Garrett W. is home on a pleasant visit to the White City. He says the show is so gigantic that a person should stay a month to see it all. Gertrude, the 2-year-old daughter of F. P. Freeman, died on Saturday evening. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon from the family residence at Twentieth and H streets.

GALLOWS TREES BLENDED

Lightning Strikes the Pines on Which Two California Assassins Swung.

At Redding, Cal., recently, lightning struck the two trees from which, nearly a year ago, indignant citizens hanged the Ruggles brothers, robbers and assassins. The flash occurred during the heaviest storm of the kind ever witnessed in the northern part of the state and when the air was filled with blinding sheets of fire, while peals of thunder seemed to shake the very hills. The pine trees stand near a blacksmith shop, and are used by the blacksmith in the process of hoisting wagon beds from the gears. Attached to the trees is a pulley block employed for the purpose. Connected with it is a cross bar of iron extending from one tree to the other. It was, to be exact, from the ends of this cross bar that the Ruggles swung. A stranger would pass these two trees of dregger pine without a second glance, but to the resident of Redding they have since the night of the lynching possessed a gruesome interest. They are not beautiful, nor even symmetrical. The fame until they were marred by the electric bolt rested solely upon the circumstance that they had served the mob as a gallows.

It was on a Tuesday morning that the city was visited by the storm. Dark clouds rolled up threateningly, and as they skurried across the sky they were lighted by an almost continual glow that made them look all the more fierce. Then the thunder grow from a rumble to a boom upon the hills, and the sudden flickering glow brightened into the gleam of living fire. Crash after crash resounded, but the lightning had almost incessant play. The artillery of the heavens seemed to be looking on a making war on the universe. A little after 10 o'clock there was lightning of such brilliancy that people involuntarily closed their eyes, and the thunder that followed was deafening. The bolt that accompanied this motion struck one of the trees forty feet from the ground, tearing away the bark and cutting six inches into the wood. The fluid passed toward the earth until it reached the iron bar, across which it passed, splitting the pulley block in twain and leaping off to the ground. There was great excitement. People rushed into the streets regardless of the heavy rain and hail. The fire bell rang, as it was thought for a while that the railroad woodsheds were burning, they stand so close to the two trees. The cold that hour became almost intense, snow having fallen on the surrounding hills and mountains. Many are the stories set about by the people in connection with the lightning, striking these two particular trees was an evidence of God's wrath at the unlawful manner in which the Ruggles brothers were slain. Others claim that it was sent as a cleansing fire to purify the spot, which had been so desecrated by the terrible deed.
